

Mark Walker and others:

I had been hopeful that Illinois was ready for fair redistricting, but I am no longer sure this will happen. If the redistricting model ends up favoring democrats unfairly by gerrymandering, how are we different from Georgia? It would amount to voter suppression which is an attack on democracy.

There may not be time this year to put redistricting in the hands of an independent commission, but that should be the goal of the Assembly.

I am a lifelong democrat who made 3500 phone calls for Joe Biden and 350 calls on behalf of the Georgia Senatorial candidates. But many times I am disheartened and ashamed of how powerful Democrats in Illinois govern.
